

Food Safety - The Official Journal of Food Safety Commission of Japan is a peer-reviewed open-access electronic online journal of English published quarterly by the FSCJ. The journal will feature four types of articles: Original articles, short communications, reviews, and risk assessments conducted by FSCJ. The risk assessments are published in this journal as risk assessment reports and their summaries prepared by FSCJ. The other articles are subjected to peer reviews.

Scope of the journal

The aim of the publication of Food Safety is to gather and disseminate scientific and technological information in the field of food safety on human health, and thereby facilitate the development of science and technology for risk assessments of foods. The journal publishes original articles, short communications, and reviews covering broad areas of food safety related to the risk assessment of foods as well as risk assessments conducted by FSCJ. Papers dealing with the following areas are particularly welcome: (1) pathogenicity or toxicity of biological, physical, or chemical agents concerning food safety; (2) occurrence of biological, physical, or chemical agents in the food chain with emphasis on food safety; (3) epidemiology or control of food-borne illnesses; and (4) safety evaluation of novel foods including nanomaterials, genetically modified organisms, etc. In addition to these areas, papers on the methodology of risk assessments concerning food safety are encouraged.

Disclaimer

The publication of original articles, short communications and reviews in Food Safety does not mean that the FSCJ condones, endorses, approves, or recommends the use of any products, services, materials, methodology, or policies stated therein. Conclusions and opinions in these articles are those of the individual authors only and do not reflect the policies or view of the FSCJ.
